Why are we considering moving Moorfields Eye Hospital?

Sight loss is an increasing problem. By 2050 it's estimated that four million people will be living with sight loss in the UK. Innovation and technology offer new possibilities for treatments and cures, but we need the right facilities to exploit these to the full.

Parts of the current Moorfields Eye Hospital at City Road in London are over 125 years old. Many people tell us they find the hospital layout confusing and spend too much time waiting in uncomfortable and overcrowded spaces.

Moorfields and its partners, the UCL Institute of Ophthalmology and Moorfields Eye Charity, are proposing to build a new centre bringing together excellent eye care, with ground-breaking research and education. The preferred location is a site that has become available at St Pancras Hospital, just north of King's Cross and St Pancras stations in central London.

The proposal is called Oriel and you can find out more about it at www.oriel-london.org.uk

Timescales

The public consultation runs from 24 May to 16 September 2019. If the proposal were to proceed to the next planning stages, the new centre could be open in 2025/26.
